

I am writing to say that I don't believe the large companies should be allowed to buy out all the small broadcast companies. It is already hard to find different points of view being expressed. This has become most evident in the reporting on the war in Iraq. We have not seen any reporting on how this war is affecting the civilian population, and not much about the Arab point of view. I think it is important that we be able to have balanced reporting and be able to draw our own conclusions, rather than having all this "cheerleading" foisted upon us. When only one point of view is presented can this be called a democracy??